OFFICIAL NEWSLETTER OF LEO CLUB OF NEGOMBO CATAMARAN FOR THE YEAR 2025/2026

Greetings from Catamarans

Immediate Past President.

Leoistic Year 2024/2025

Leo Lion Adithya Weerasignhe PFLM

Leo Club of Negombo Catamaran

Dear Leos,

As I pen down these words as your Immediate Past President, I am overwhelmed with gratitude, pride, and joy. The past year has been one of the most rewarding journeys of my life, and I am truly humbled by the incredible support and commitment shown by each and every member of our club.

Looking back, I realize that every challenge we overcame, every project we carried out, and every life we touched was only possible because of the strength of our unity. Each of you—through your time, energy, creativity, and passion—contributed to making our year a success. For that, I am deeply thankful.

Together, we did not just dream big—we achieved big. Being recognized as the Best Club in Sri Lanka and the Maldives is not just an award; it is a reflection of our collective hard work, dedication, and the unwavering Leo spirit that drives us forward. This honor belongs to every single member, because without your effort, encouragement, and enthusiasm, such a milestone would never have been possible.

Although my journey as your President has come to an end, my bond with this club will never fade. Titles may change, but my heart will always remain with this family. This year, as I step into my new role as Region Chairperson of Region B, Leo District 306 D3, I remain fully committed to standing by our club. I will do everything within my capacity to support, guide, and uplift our members as you continue to reach new heights of service and leadership.

Our story does not end with one achievement—it is only the beginning of a legacy that will continue to inspire many more. Let us keep working together with the same energy, determination, and unity that brought us this far. I have no doubt that the future of our club shines brighter than ever, and the best is yet to come.

Past President.

Leoistic Year 2023/2024

Leo Lion Shenal Tissera.

Leo Club of Negombo Catamaran

It brings me great joy to pen down a few words for this edition of our club newsletter. As a Past President, I look back with immense pride at the journey our club has taken and the milestones we have achieved together. Every project, every initiative, and every smile we created in the community is a testament to the dedication and spirit of service that defines us.

Leadership is never about one person—it is about the collective passion, teamwork, and willingness to serve. During my term, I was privileged to witness the strength of unity and the power of young leaders who continue to inspire me every day.

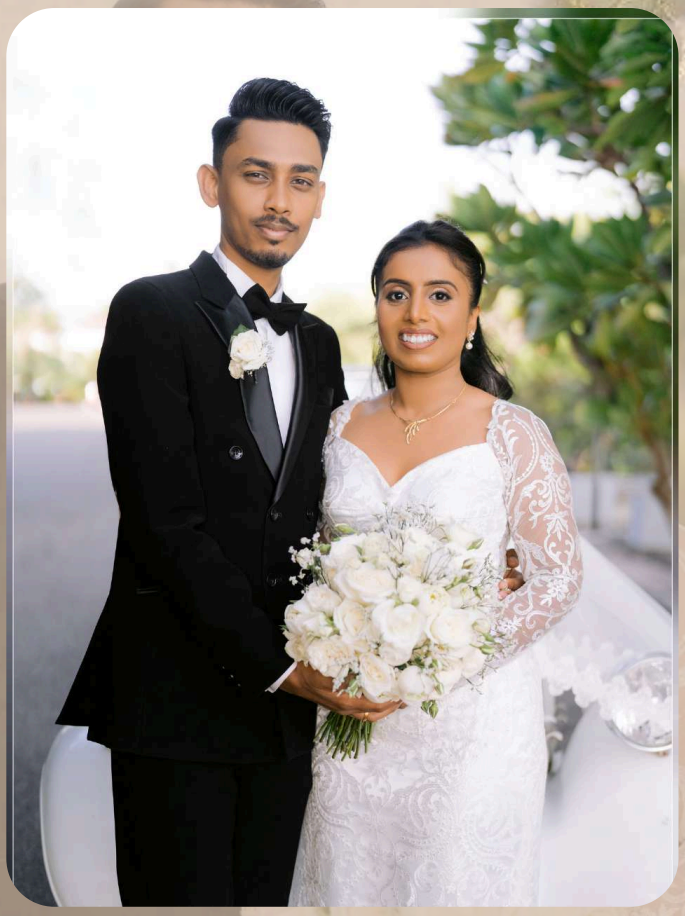
I am deeply proud of the way our club has grown, not just in numbers, but in commitment, creativity, and impact. As you carry forward the torch, I encourage each member to remain bold in your ideas, compassionate in your actions, and unwavering in your service.

This year, as I serve as the Multiple District Assistant Treasurer, I remain committed to supporting our club in every way I can. Know that I will always be there to guide, assist, and cheer you on as you continue to uplift communities and strengthen our movement.

Remember, being a Leo is more than a title—it is a promise to serve with respect, integrity, and heart.

Wishing the current leadership and every member the very best as you continue to create a legacy of service. The future of our club is bright because of you.

CONGRATULATIONS!!



The Leo Club of Negombo Catamaran extends its warmest congratulations to our dedicated members, Leo Emalsha and Leo Dimith, on the joyous occasion of their wedding. As they embark on this new journey together, we take pride in celebrating this milestone alongside them. Their commitment and service to the club have been truly commendable, and it brings us great joy to witness this beautiful union. On behalf of the entire Catamaran family, we wish them a future filled with love, happiness, and prosperity, and may their partnership continue to inspire and strengthen those around them.

A TRUE LEADER IS NOT ONLY DEFINED BY WORDS, BUT BY VISION, DEDICATION, AND THE STRENGTH TO INSPIRE OTHERS

RESPECTED LEADER

A SPECIAL FEATURE: INSIGHTS FROM THE DISTRICT PRESIDENT

LEO LION LASIKUMAR PARAMESWARAN
DISTRICT PRESIDENT
LEO DISTRICT 306D3

A TRUE LEADER IS DEFINED NOT BY POSITION, BUT BY THE ABILITY TO INSPIRE OTHERS, FOSTER GROWTH, AND LEAD WITH INTEGRITY. THROUGH VISION, HUMILITY, AND DEDICATION, A LEADER CREATES MEANINGFUL CHANGE AND LEAVES BEHIND A LEGACY OF EMPOWERMENT AND SERVICE

In every Leo year, the District President plays a vital role in guiding, inspiring, and uniting clubs under one vision. This year, we are honored to be led by Leo Lion Lasikumar Parameswaran whose dedication and passion for service shine through every project and initiative. In this special interview, we had the opportunity to ask a few questions to gain insight into their journey, goals, and vision for our Leo family.

What inspired you to take on the role of District President, and what does leadership in the Leo movement mean to you?

When I first became the Charter Vice President and a member of the Leo Club of Colombo Waters Meet, I was going through a very stressful time in life, facing challenges both personally and in business. The Leo movement became my strength — it gave me hope, confidence, and a family that helped me rise again. That experience inspired me to give something back, not only to my club but also to my district.

At the same time, I also saw certain struggles within the district — a lack of unity among clubs and some negative patterns that were holding us back. I felt a deep responsibility to change that, to build a new culture of collaboration, and to bring every club together as one family.

For me, leadership in the Leo movement means exactly that — giving back, guiding, empowering, and creating opportunities for others, just as the movement once did for me. It is about fostering unity, inspiring growth, and proving that together, we can achieve something far greater than ourselves

What are the main goals and priorities you hope to achieve during your term?

Like every District President, I will focus on strengthening administration and building strong leadership across the district. But beyond that, my key priorities are very clear: I want to bring in at least six new clubs — including Alpha clubs — while also focusing on underperforming clubs, guiding them to become active and impactful again. For the clubs that have been inactive for a long time, I believe we either have to reactivate them or, with the agreement of our Lions, consider closing them so that our district remains strong and meaningful.

Above everything else, my biggest goal is to create a culture of happiness and unity. I want every Leo of D3 to walk into a district event with a smile, and walk out with an even bigger smile. I want my district executive committee and council members to serve wholeheartedly — not with stress or financial burden — but with joy, pride, and fulfillment. Because when we are happy and united, we can achieve far greater things as LeosOfD3

How do you plan to support and empower individual Leo clubs within the district?

Supporting and empowering individual Leo clubs is one of my top priorities as District President. I plan to guide and mentor club leaders, helping them improve their projects, administration, and overall performance. For clubs that are underperforming, I will personally work with them to regain confidence and activity.

I also want to make sure every club has the resources, training, and support they need, so no club feels limited. By encouraging collaboration, sharing ideas, and celebrating each club's achievements, we can create a stronger sense of unity and pride across the district.

Ultimately, my goal is for every Leo club to feel empowered, supported, and motivated to make a meaningful impact, while being proud to be part of Leo District 306 D3.

What challenges do you see Leos facing today, and how do you think we can overcome them?

Leos today face several challenges. Financial burdens, managing time between personal commitments and Leo activities, and sometimes a lack of confidence to take risks can hold them back. Many also tend to stay in their comfort zones, which limits growth and impact.

To overcome these challenges, we need to encourage smart planning, resource-sharing, and mentorship, so Leos can manage their responsibilities effectively. We must also create a supportive environment that motivates them to step out of their comfort zones, take calculated risks, and embrace opportunities for personal and community growth. By doing this, we can empower every Leo to reach their full potential while making a meaningful difference in society.

Can you share a memorable experience from your Leo journey that shaped the leader you are today?

One of the most memorable experiences from my Leo journey happened during my club presidency year. We conducted a project called 'Sew Her' for women empowerment. During the project, we received a request to help a family in need — the husband had passed away, the wife had three small children, and her father was bedridden with cancer.

After speaking with the family, we learned that the wife knew tailoring. Instead of just giving ration items, we decided to provide her with a sewing machine, so she could earn an income independently and sustainably. That family is still in touch with us, and we continue to support them.

This experience made me realize the real impact of thoughtful service — how empowering just one person can change lives. It inspired me to lead with purpose, compassion, and a focus on creating meaningful, lasting impact. Moments like these are what shaped me into the leader I am today.

How do you see the Leo movement contributing to the broader mission of Lions Clubs International?

The Leo movement plays a vital role in supporting the broader mission of Lions Clubs International. Our Leo members — the young, passionate, and service-minded individuals — take initiative in community projects, develop leadership skills, and inspire others to serve.

Leo Lions, who continue their journey after Leo membership, bridge the gap between youth service and Lions leadership. They bring experience, energy, and dedication into Lions activities, helping to expand service, strengthen clubs, and ensure the continuity of the Lions mission. Together, Leos and Leo Lions amplify the impact of Lions, creating a stronger, more connected, and service-oriented community

What advice would you give to young Leos who aspire to take up leadership positions in the future?

My advice to young Leos aspiring to take up leadership positions is to always be ready — not just in Leo activities, but in life. You never know when an opportunity or challenge will come your way, so preparedness is key.

Be brave and bold in your decisions; taking risks and stepping out of your comfort zone will help you grow and survive challenges. Most importantly, serve with sincerity — when you do good for your club, district, and community, it will always come back to you in the form of experience, respect, and personal growth.

How do you balance your personal, professional, and Leo life while carrying such a big responsibility?

Owning my startup gives me an added advantage because I have full control over my schedule and can manage my commitments efficiently. Having my family — my parents and sisters — involved in the Lions movement also helps, as they understand the responsibilities and challenges of serving the community.

Even my personal friends are part of the movement, which makes Leo activities a natural part of my life. Honestly, Leo has become such an integral part of my world that it's hard to separate it from everything else — even my girlfriend gets a laugh out of how much I live and breathe Leo!

Through this conversation, it is clear that Leo Lion Lasikumar is committed to strengthening the Leo movement with energy, innovation, and heart. Their vision reminds us that leadership is not only about guiding others but also about creating opportunities for growth and service. As we continue this Leo year, let's carry forward the spirit of unity and dedication shared by our District President.

THE PRIDE OF THE MONTH...

Leo Suranga Wijayapura

We are delighted to recognize Leo Suranga Wijayapura as our Leo of the Month for August 2025. As one of the most active and newly installed members of the Leo Club of Negombo Catamaran, Suranga has already made a remarkable impression through his dedication, commitment, and enthusiasm for service.

His active participation in a wide range of club projects has shown his genuine passion for making a difference and supporting the club's growth. Always willing to step forward, Suranga brings not only energy but also reliability and teamwork to every task he takes on.

What makes him truly stand out is that his impact goes far beyond our club. Suranga has actively participated in both district-level and multiple-district-level activities, proudly representing our club and contributing to the larger Leo movement. His drive to serve at every level embodies the true spirit of Leoism—leadership, service, and fellowship.

Congratulations, Suranga! Your efforts and commitment are deeply appreciated, and we are confident you will continue to shine as a role model for many Leos to come

Brainstorm

The Club Orientation Program, which aimed to introduce new members to the organization's vision, mission, and service opportunities, was successfully held on August 3. The gathering gave attendees a chance to network with other members and acquire insightful knowledge. Three well-known guest speakers were a major highlight of the program, sharing their knowledge and experiences to motivate and mentor the attendees. Leo Shenal Tissera concentrated on career development and youth empowerment, Leo Rachika Sovis offered insightful viewpoints on teamwork and community service, and Dr. Jeewantha Perera led an educational session with an emphasis on leadership and personal development. Their efforts greatly enhanced the program by inspiring participants to confidently and enthusiastically assume their roles. Overall, the orientation program promoted long-term commitment, leadership development, and active participation among members in addition to raising awareness of the club's goals.

Winning is not the ultimate measure of life. True success lies in learning, growing, and cherishing every step of the journey, for each experience shapes character and builds strength

Hearts in Harmony

An orphanage that houses and cares for children who have survived sexual abuse and challenging life situations was visited as part of a humanitarian project organised by the Leo Club of Negombo Catamaran. The project was created to give these kids, many of whom deal with serious social and psychological issues on a daily basis, joy, emotional support, and a feeling of belonging.

Club members created a joyful and communal atmosphere by involving the children in interactive and recreational activities like games, singing, and cultural performances during the visit. In addition, a special lunch was planned and provided, guaranteeing not only a memorable occasion but also a wholesome meal that demonstrated the club's concern and care. The children felt loved, valued, and included as a result of the day's additional enrichment, which included moments of bonding, laughter, and the sharing of positive values.

In addition to directly improving the lives of a vulnerable community, this project gave Leo members a chance to hone their leadership, collaboration, and organising abilities. Through this project, the club spread joy and hope to those in need while reinforcing its mission of service, compassion, and social responsibility.

Pulse of hope

The Leo Club of Negombo Catamaran held a blood drive at Sri Dharmarathanarama Viharasthanaya Temple in Dalupotha on August 23 at 9:00 a.m. The event served two purposes: it addressed the need for blood in hospitals and other healthcare facilities, and it meaningfully paid tribute to Beenu Hiranya's beloved memory. Many kind members of the community participated in the campaign by stepping forward to donate blood, demonstrating a strong sense of solidarity and compassion. This project offered a priceless chance to spread the word about the significance of regular blood donation and inspired people to give voluntarily regularly, ultimately saving countless lives. The project demonstrated the club's dedication to civic duty, humanity, and selfless service in addition to meeting a pressing healthcare need. Additionally, it helped members develop their organizational, leadership, and teamwork abilities while encouraging increased involvement in upcoming humanitarian projects.

Aureüm

On August 9, 2025, the Leo Club of Negombo Catamaran held its 7th Charter Anniversary and Installation Ceremony, called Aureum, at Pledge Scape in Negombo. This historic event marked the start of a new era of accountability and development while commemorating seven years of service, leadership, and community dedication.

Important individuals graced the ceremony. The Chief Guest, Leo Lion Lasikumar Parameswaran, the district president of Leo District 306 D3. The Guest of Honour, Leo Lion Rageesh Yogeswaran MJF PMAF PFLM, Multiple District President of Leo District 306 in Sri Lanka and the Maldives. The Special Guest, Leo Lion Nishane Silva FLM, the immediate past district president of Leo District 306 B1. Members were motivated to fortify their service journeys by their direction and support.

In order to symbolise their duties and dedication to leadership, the incoming Board was pinned with badges during the event, and new prospects were formally inducted as members. The newly inducted prospects had the chance to meet and talk with the club's leaders during a fellowship session that took place after the installation ceremony. The spirit of the Leo movement was further enhanced by this meeting, which promoted mentoring, bolstered unity, and created deep connections

The evening concluded on a high note with heartfelt gratitude extended to all the guests, sponsors, and members who contributed to making Aureum a resounding success. The 7th Charter Anniversary and Installation Ceremony not only celebrated the club's remarkable journey over the years but also paved the way for greater achievements ahead. With renewed commitment and a united vision, the Leo Club of Negombo Catamaran stands ready to continue its legacy of service, leadership, and positive impact in the community.

MISS TEEN SRILANKA 2025
REDIFING BEAUTY WITH PURPOSE
NELEE FERNANDO
Leos of SriLanka & Maldives

This month, we are delighted to feature Nelee Manish Fernando, the radiant young achiever who was crowned Miss Teen Sri Lanka 2024. At just 18, Nelee has already become a symbol of grace, determination, and inspiration for many young Sri Lankans. Beyond her accomplishments in pageantry, she is passionate about creativity, culture, and promoting the beauty of Sri Lanka to the world. Recently, she also joined our club as a prospect, bringing her vibrant energy and vision into our community. In this exclusive conversation, Nelee opens up about her journey, challenges, passions, and dreams for the future.

What inspired you to take part in Miss Teen Sri Lanka, and how did your journey in pageantry begin?

honestly speaking, I always knew I had something in me that was unique. What inspired me was the way pageant queens carry themselves with confidence and how they can use their voice to speak for what's wanted. How I started my pageantry journeyed is because of my mom. She is the one who forced me to apply for the QOTW pageant and along with me, they chose my mom to be in the MRS category as well. And my parents have been supporting in every single step. I applied for the first pageant, "Queen of the world" because my parents told me it would be great if I could do it and even the national director convinced me that this is the start of a new journey and I belong in this field either everything that I carry.

When taking part, I met Rozanne Diaz (former Miss universe Srilanka 2005) she helped, supported and taught me the unique things I have in me that I couldn't see. We always have to know to take part in official pageants. I knew I was the winner for this pageant that I took part in along with my mom, but it was biased and I ended up being second. Which I must say I'm not sad about, because when one door closes, another one opens. That's when Rozanne and the brand Akshata saw my potential and nominated me to be Miss teen Srilanka 2025..

Competing at such a young age must come with challenges. What obstacles did you face, and how did you overcome them?

pageantry is not an easy journey. You have to sacrifice a lot. Your sleep, your time on the phone, your free time and so on. If you want to be a great example, you have to work for it. I went through so much physical and mental stress but what helped me the most are the people around me who supported me and motivated me through out. And also I'm a big Catholic, so I always pray to get my peace. You have a lot to prepare for. The mini titles, the walk, the confidence, the anonymous question, standing long hours while wearing around 6 inch heels and so on.

As Miss Teen Sri Lanka, how do you see your role in representing young Sri Lankan women?

I want to inspire them to be themselves. To not wanting to be someone someday but to work on being the best version of themselves. By leading with example and most importantly, to be humble. My biggest blessing in my personality is the way I act with everyone. If I find someone who is negative towards me, I would not care to even talk. My only personality is being a positive and bubbly person. I want to teach them what's right and what's wrong. I want to be an inspiration for them and help them with the doubts that they are facing as young women.

Beyond modeling and pageantry, what passions or hobbies are closest to your heart?

I personal love sports which are netball, badminton, volleyball and baseball. I love crocheting, reading...I finish books in like three days. playing the keyboard, DANCING, I love dancing so much. I love food (literally LOVE), traveling and making videos about it, socializing with people and more than anything I LOVE BABIES. And my biggest hobby is laughing.

How do you manage to balance your studies, personal life, and pageantry while excelling in all areas?

I personally am someone who can multitask. When it comes to studies, I excel at it because of my ability to listen well and also complete something and not stop halfway. I always have space for my personal life and not get it jumbled up with work and everything. It's part of who I am, everything I do and how I manage to balance everything my parents. Without thinking twice, I will say it's my parents. The way they work with so much dedication and sacrifice their time to give us what we need and in supporting us in what we do. The way they manage to balance everything while giving us the love. I aspire to be like my parents. Someone else I look up to in terms of a celebrity is, Anudi Gunasekara. She's the former Miss Srilanka for miss world 2025. The way she carries herself elegantly, her humble heart, her ability to answer any question with confidence. It inspires me so much!

Who has been your biggest inspiration in life, and why?

What advice would you give to other young people in Sri Lanka who dream of stepping into pageantry or pursuing their creative ambitions?

Do what you love. Us women tend to stop ourselves from doing what we love most of the time because we are influenced by the society about how we were made to cook, clean and take care of kids. Well that's totally the wrong mindset, and mind you girls, please do not fall for a man with that mindset or any man just at the age where you need to focusing on your self and fulfilling your goals!! Many women get gullible and blinded by love at young age and tend to stop everything else and try and satisfy the relationship which ends up messing with their mentality. Please focus on what you love, accept your insecurities and love you for the woman you are and keep going for the goals you WANT in life!

Where do you see yourself five years from now, and what is your ultimate dream beyond the crown?

honestly speaking, I cannot guarantee where I see myself in five years. Our mind changes every second in what we do. But my ultimate goal is to be in the Miss world competition and to be the first and bring history to Sri Lanka! My ultimate goal above the dream is to be an example, an inspiration and a motivation to all the young women out there!

Nelee's story is a reminder that with passion, discipline, and a fearless heart, young people can achieve incredible things while staying true to their roots. As she continues her journey in pageantry and beyond, we are excited to see her shine even brighter, both as a representative of Sri Lanka and as an inspiring member of our community.

Dear Leos of Negombo Catamaran,

It is truly inspiring to witness the energy, creativity, and dedication you bring into Leoism. Each of you, as young leaders, carry a spark of passion that not only shapes your own journeys but also lights the path for countless others to follow. Leadership, after all, is not about holding a title or position—it is about creating meaningful impact, inspiring positive change, and leaving behind a legacy of service.

Your efforts as a club have already proven the strength of teamwork, commitment, and vision. Every project you undertake, every small act of kindness you show, and every challenge you rise above reflects the values of courage, compassion, and dedication. These qualities are the foundation upon which true leaders are built, and I am proud to see them shine so strongly within each of you

Remember that no act of service is too small. A smile you share, a hand you extend, or an idea you bring forward has the power to transform not just one life, but entire communities. Together, your actions ripple outward, inspiring hope and reminding society that change is possible when hearts and hands come together

As Leos, you are more than just members of a youth movement—you are the hope of tomorrow, the leaders of the future Lions, and the driving force behind a brighter, kinder world. The journey you are on will not always be easy, but it is through perseverance and unity that you will continue to grow stronger. Carry forward this spirit with pride, because you represent not only your club and district, but also the values of Leoism across Sri Lanka and beyond.

Keep roaring with passion, stand firm in your purpose, and let your actions continue to inspire transformation in society. May your service always be guided by compassion, your leadership by integrity, and your vision by the dream of a better tomorrow.

With best wishes!

THE ICON OF SERVICE...

Melvin Jones

Founder of Lions Clubs International

Melvin Jones was born on January 13, 1879, at Fort Thomas—then in the Arizona Territory—where his father served as a U.S. Army scout captain. Around age seven, his family moved east to Illinois. As a young man, Jones contemplated a musical career, having a fine tenor voice, but instead pursued business and insurance

By 1913, he had launched his own insurance agency in Chicago and became active in a local luncheon group for businessmen, known as the "Business Circle." Elected secretary, Jones began questioning the group's narrow focus on financial networking

Fuelled by a bold idea—"What if these men who are successful because of their drive, intelligence, and ambition, were to put their talents to work improving their communities?"—Jones penned letters inviting clubs nationwide to explore a community-focused organization

The response culminated in a historic meeting in Chicago on June 7, 1917, where delegates laid the groundwork for the Association of Lions Clubs, later renamed Lions Clubs International. Later that year, at the inaugural Lions convention in Dallas, Texas, the group adopted its constitution, bylaws, code of ethics, and emblem. Jones was appointed secretary-treasurer, a role he held for decades, eventually becoming secretary general for life

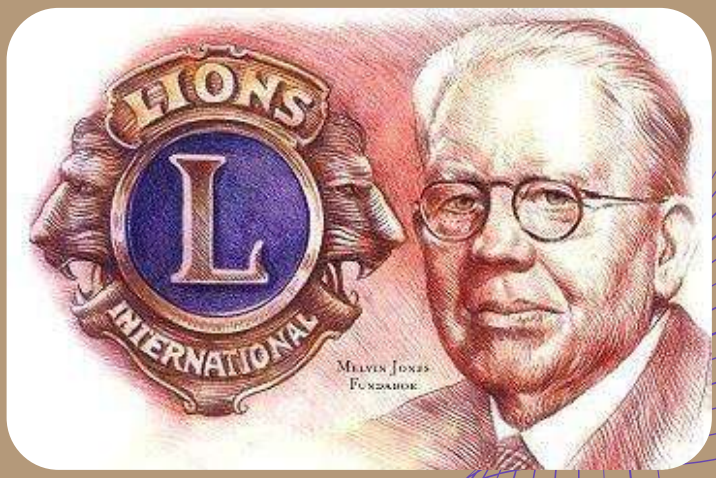
INSPIRING LIVES

Known for his dynamic leadership, Jones shaped the organization's core values and guiding principles. He was a prolific writer whose founding documents—such as the motto "We Serve" and the Code of Ethics —still inspire Lions members today

A favorite phrase of his, framed in his office, embodied his philosophy: "Truth and roses have thorns about them." His personal credo, "You can't get very far until you start doing something for somebody else," became a timeless beacon for service beyond self

In 1926, Jones left his insurance business to lead Lions Clubs full time, serving as its de facto CEO and global goodwill ambassador. He managed the expanding headquarters and traveled extensively, spreading the mission of service worldwide

In 1945, he represented Lions Clubs International as a consultant at the United Nations Conference on International Organization in San Francisco, contributing to the establishment of the United Nations



His memory is honored in many ways around the world:

- A statue stands at Lions Clubs International headquarters, Oak Brook, Illinois.
- A 50-foot memorial spire marks his birthplace in Fort Thomas.
- Various memorials—from murals to streets, squares to schools—bear his name across continents, including Europe, Asia, and Latin America

Melvin Jones passed away on June 1, 1961, at age 82, leaving behind a legacy of service and global reach

THE ICON OF SERVICE...

Wangari Maathai
The Woman Who Planted Hope

When we think of role models, our minds often go to world leaders, inventors, or great reformers of centuries past. But sometimes, the most inspiring figures come from the not-so-distant past individuals who faced enormous challenges and proved that courage, compassion, and determination can change the world. One such remarkable figure is Wangari Maathai, a Kenyan environmentalist, human rights advocate, and Nobel Peace Prize laureate.

Wangari Maathai was born in 1940 in rural Kenya. Growing up in a farming family, she developed a deep love for the land and an early understanding of how much people depend on nature for survival. At a time when opportunities for African girls were scarce, she pursued education with unmatched determination.
Through her hard work and brilliance, she won a scholarship to study in the United States, where she earned degrees in biology and veterinary science. Later, she became the first woman in East and Central Africa to earn a doctorate. This achievement alone made her a pioneer, but Maathai was only just beginning her journey.

The Green Belt Movement – Planting More Than Trees

In the 1970s, Maathai saw how deforestation in Kenya was causing devastating problems: rivers were drying, farmland was eroding, and women had to walk miles to find firewood. Instead of simply raising her voice, she came up with a solution—planting trees.
In 1977, she founded the Green Belt Movement, a grassroots initiative that encouraged women to plant trees in their communities. What started with a small idea grew into a massive campaign. Over the decades, the movement led to more than 50 million trees being planted across Africa

But this was about more than the environment. By involving women, Maathai gave them income opportunities, a sense of independence, and a platform to stand up for their rights. The Green Belt Movement became a symbol of hope, showing how simple acts can transform societies.

Maathai's journey was not easy. She often clashed with the Kenyan government, which viewed her work as a threat. She was arrested, beaten, and ridiculed, yet she refused to back down. For her, protecting nature and empowering people were battles worth fighting.

Her courage inspired many, proving that standing up for what is right—even in the face of powerful opposition—can change history.

In 2004, Wangari Maathai became the first African woman to receive the Nobel Peace Prize. The award recognized her extraordinary contribution to sustainable development, democracy, and peace. She showed the world that caring for the environment is not separate from caring for humanity—it is deeply connected.

Legacy That Lives On

Wangari Maathai passed away in 2011, but her impact continues to grow. Forests in Kenya still thrive because of her work. Women and youth across Africa continue planting trees in her memory. And globally, she is remembered as the woman who taught us that environmental protection, social justice, and peace are branches of the same tree.

Wangari Maathai is more than an environmentalist; she is a symbol of resilience, innovation, and hope. She reminds us that:

- Great change can start with a single person and a single idea.
- Empowering others multiplies impact.

For these reasons, Wangari Maathai remains a timeless role model. She showed the world that planting a tree is not just an act of saving nature—it is an act of saving the future.

The Israel-Gaza Conflict...

Since October 2023, the Israel–Gaza war has dominated global headlines. What began with a sudden and devastating attack by Hamas on southern Israel spiraled into one of the deadliest and most destructive conflicts in the Middle East in decades. By August 2025, the war had dragged on for nearly two years, leaving Gaza in ruins, thousands of civilians dead, and the region stuck in a cycle of violence, politics, and international debate.

A War That Refuses to End...

When the world first awoke to the horrors of October 7, 2023, the expectation was that the Israel–Gaza war would be swift, decisive, and perhaps wrapped up within months. Hamas's unprecedented assault on southern Israel left more than 1,200 people dead, shocking Israelis and the international community alike. In response, Israel launched what Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu called a mission to "eliminate Hamas once and for all."

Yet, nearly two years later, the conflict drags on. By August 2025, the war has become a defining crisis of the Middle East, reshaping politics, diplomacy, and the lives of millions caught in its destructive path.

Human Cost Beyond Measure

The devastation is staggering. According to United Nations estimates, more than 40,000 Palestinians have been killed since the war began. Women and children make up a significant portion of the dead. Gaza, once home to vibrant markets and seaside neighborhoods, has been reduced to rubble. Entire families live in tents, with limited access to food, water, or electricity. Nearly two million people are displaced, their futures uncertain.

Israel too has endured pain. More than 1,500 Israelis have died in the war, many of them soldiers involved in relentless ground operations inside Gaza. Families of hostages still held by Hamas continue to march in Tel Aviv, demanding answers from their government.

Mustafa Barghouti, leader of the Palestinian National Initiative, summarized the desperation on the ground: "For us, the most important thing is to stop the devastation and the destruction."

Politics in the Shadows of War

The battlefield is only one side of the story. Politics has played an equally decisive role in shaping the war's trajectory.

On the Palestinian side, Hamas remains the de facto authority in Gaza, refusing to disarm and positioning itself as a symbol of resistance. Meanwhile, Fatah, led by Mahmoud Abbas and based in the West Bank, has sought to reassert influence through proposals for a post-war administrative committee. In December 2024, the two rivals reached a rare agreement in Cairo to form a joint technocratic body that would govern Gaza's basic services after the war. But the ink was hardly dry before disagreements surfaced, and Israel flatly rejected any arrangement that appeared to validate Hamas's rule.

In Israel, Prime Minister Netanyahu leads a fragile coalition that includes far-right parties like Religious Zionism, led by Bezalel Smotrich, and Jewish Power, represented by Itamar Ben-Gvir. Both men have vocally opposed ceasefires, insisting that any deal short of Hamas's total eradication is a betrayal. Netanyahu, under immense domestic and international pressure, has walked a tightrope between military escalation and diplomatic compromise.

Foreign Minister Gideon Saar was blunt in early 2025: "We will not accept the continued presence of Hamas or any other terrorist organization in Gaza."

The Ceasefires That Weren't

The story of this war is littered with ceasefires that collapsed almost as soon as they were declared.

In January 2025, a breakthrough seemed possible when Qatar, Egypt, and the United States brokered a three-phase ceasefire agreement. The deal promised the release of hostages in exchange for Palestinian prisoners, Israeli troop withdrawals from densely populated areas, and a roadmap toward a longer truce. Qatar's Prime Minister Sheikh Mohammed bin Abdulrahman Al Thani hailed it as a turning point, declaring: "Both parties should commit totally to all three phases to steer away from further bloodshed and from escalation in the region."

For a moment, there was hope. Dozens of hostages were freed, and Israeli forces pulled back from parts of Gaza. But as the second phase loomed which called for deeper withdrawals and more prisoner exchanges tensions boiled over. Hardliners in Netanyahu's coalition denounced the deal as surrender, while Hamas accused Israel of dragging its feet. By summer 2025, most of the agreement's promises remained unfulfilled.

Subsequent negotiations have floated the idea of a five-to-seven-year truce, reconstruction funds for Gaza, and international oversight. Yet, the same obstacles persist: Israel's demand that Hamas disarm, Hamas's refusal to cede power, and the question of who will govern Gaza once the dust settles.

Regional Ripples and Global Outcry

The Gaza war has not stayed within Gaza. Hezbollah in Lebanon continues to exchange fire with Israeli forces. Iranian-backed militias in Syria and Iraq have escalated tensions, while Houthi rebels in Yemen disrupted shipping in the Red Sea. Each front has threatened to expand the war into a broader regional conflict.

Around the world, streets have filled with protestors calling for an end to the bloodshed. In capitals from London to Jakarta, "Free Palestine" banners fly alongside calls for hostage releases. The United States has walked a delicate line remaining Israel's strongest ally while increasingly pressing for humanitarian restraint. The United Nations has passed multiple resolutions demanding ceasefires, yet enforcement remains elusive.

Wars are often measured in numbers — in lives lost, buildings destroyed, and days counted since the first shots were fired. But behind every statistic in the Israel–Gaza conflict is a human story: a family torn apart, a child without a home, a community longing for peace.

As August 2025 draws to a close, the question lingers: will this war become yet another chapter in an endless cycle of violence, or can it be the painful turning point toward something better? The answer remains unwritten. What is clear, however, is that the world is watching and hoping for a moment when dialogue finally replaces destruction, and when the voices of peace grow louder than the sounds of war.

SL Racing Into History...

Yevan David

Sri Lanka's First Formula 3 Driver

Motorsport is a world of speed, precision, and dreams but for Sri Lanka, it has rarely been a field where its flag was seen waving. That is, until now.

On August 8, 2025, the motorsport community erupted with the news that 18-year-old Yevan David had signed with AIX Racing to compete in the 2026 FIA Formula 3 Championship.

With that signing, Yevan not only carved his own destiny but also etched Sri Lanka's name into the history books as he becomes the first-ever Sri Lankan driver to enter Formula 3—the gateway to Formula 1.

The Early Spark: A Child with a Kart and a Dream

Yevan's story begins not on the glamour of Formula 3 circuits, but on the humble karting tracks of Asia. His first taste of racing came at the age of 10, when most kids were only beginning to think about bicycles and cricket bats. With a helmet almost too big for him, Yevan's raw passion and natural instinct behind the wheel were undeniable.

In 2017, he shocked the racing world by winning the IAME Asia Series X30 Cadet title, a championship fiercely contested by some of Asia's most promising karting talents. The following year, he lifted the X30 Asia Cup in Sri Lanka, a moment that made local motorsport fans sit up and take notice.

From there, Yevan's star rose quickly. He began competing in European karting championships the beating heart of junior motorsport where he went wheel-to-wheel with future F1 hopefuls. Podium finishes at the FIA Karting Academy Trophy and the WSK Champions Cup confirmed what many already believed: Sri Lanka had a prodigy on its hands.

The Leap to Cars: Learning the Craft

Transitioning from karts to cars is one of the toughest challenges for young racers. The machines are faster, heavier, and demand incredible physical and mental discipline.

In 2024, Yevan took that leap, entering Formula 4 UAE and later competing in Spanish F4 with Saintéloc Racing. These series are known for producing names that later rise to Formula 1, and though he was a rookie, Yevan showed flashes of brilliance.

That same year, he represented Sri Lanka in the FIA Motorsport Games. Carrying his country's flag in a world event was a proud moment, and his pole position in the Formula 4 Cup was symbolic—it was proof that a boy from Colombo could out-qualify drivers from countries with decades of racing heritage.

The European Breakthrough: Euroformula Open

If 2024 was about learning, then 2025 was about proving. Racing in the Euroformula Open Championship with Team Motopark, Yevan found his stride.

In just a guest appearance at the end of 2024, he stunned fans by taking two victories and a podium finish. That was enough to convince both his team and his supporters that he was ready for a full campaign.

Throughout the 2025 season, he delivered:

- 4 race wins
- 9 podium finishes
- 1 pole position
- 1 fastest lap
- 213 championship points

These results weren't just numbers—they were statements. Statements that he could not only compete but dominate against Europe's elite.

Adding to his resume, Yevan made his debut in the GB3 Championship at Silverstone, racing in Britain's top single-seater series and soaking up experience on one of the world's most iconic tracks.

The Historic Announcement: AIX Racing & Formula 3

On August 8, 2025, AIX Racing unveiled their first driver for the 2026 season: Yevan David. It was more than just another driver signing it was the opening of a new chapter for Sri Lanka.

"I'm very thankful for this opportunity," Yevan said. "To be racing as the first Sri Lankan in Formula 3 is a huge honor. With AIX Racing, I'm excited to achieve great milestones in the season ahead."

For a nation that has never had representation in the upper tiers of motorsport, this announcement felt like a watershed moment

For readers new to the motorsport ladder, Formula 3 may sound like "just another racing series," but in truth, it is one of the most important stages on the Road to F1.

Here's why it matters:

- Gateway to Formula 1: Formula 3 runs on the same weekends as Formula 1. Every race is watched closely by F1 team scouts and sponsors.
- Equal Machinery: All drivers race with identical cars, meaning results depend solely on driver skill, strategy, and mental toughness.
- Proven Path: Current F1 stars like Charles Leclerc, George Russell, and Lando Norris all passed through F3 before rising to the pinnacle.

If Yevan can prove himself in F3, the next step is Formula 2 and from there, a real shot at Formula 1

Beyond trophies and titles, Yevan represents something bigger. He is a symbol of possibility for Sri Lanka a country better known for cricket, volleyball, and athletics than motorsport.

His journey shows that with talent, determination, and international exposure, Sri Lankans can compete on the same global stage as drivers from Britain, Italy, or Japan. Already, his rise has sparked interest among young enthusiasts and has given a new identity to the island nation in motorsport circles.

The 2026 Formula 3 season will be the toughest test of Yevan's career so far. Competing against 30 of the world's best young drivers across legendary circuits like Silverstone, Spa-Francorchamps, and Monza, he will be challenged in every aspect speed, racecraft, mental resilience, and consistency.
But if his journey so far is any indication, Sri Lanka can expect to see him fighting at the front.

As Sri Lanka eagerly watches the start of the 2026 Formula 3 season, Yevan David's story reminds us that greatness often begins with a dream, no matter how far-fetched it may seem. From karting tracks in Asia to podiums in Europe, his rise has been built on perseverance, courage, and a refusal to be limited by circumstance. Now, carrying the weight of a nation's pride, he steps onto the global stage not only as a driver but as a symbol of hope for every Sri Lankan who dares to chase the extraordinary. Formula 3 will be a new challenge, filled with rivalries, pressure, and the relentless pursuit of excellence, but Yevan has already shown that he belongs among the best. Whatever the future holds—whether it leads to Formula 2, Formula 1, or beyond—Sri Lanka has already gained a trailblazer who has opened doors and inspired a generation to dream faster, bigger, and bolder.

As the world counts down to the 2026 season, one thing is clear: Yevan David is not just racing cars, he is racing into history.

With every lap, he carries not just his own dream, but the hopes of a nation ready to embrace motorsport like never before. And while the road to Formula 1 is long and demanding, Sri Lanka has already won something priceless: representation, pride, and the birth of a new sporting icon.

DID YOU KNOW?

Did you know that there's a type of star that can actually swallow its own planets? Stars like BD+48 740, located thousands of light-years away, have been observed spinning faster and releasing unusual elements, like lithium, which hints that they've consumed nearby planets. This happens because as stars age, they expand into massive red giants, sometimes engulfing planets that were once safely orbiting them. In a way, stars are not just shining in the night sky. they can be destructive cosmic feasts. This also means that billions of years from now, our own Sun could potentially swallow Mercury, Venus, or even Earth! It's a spooky yet fascinating reminder of just how dynamic and unpredictable our universe truly is.

The Painter's Secret...

Long ago, in a quiet little village tucked between emerald hills and a winding silver river, there lived a painter named Elian. His hands seemed to hold sunlight, rain, and wind all at once because whatever he painted felt alive. His sunsets burned brighter than the real sky, his rivers rippled with motion, and his portraits carried such depth that villagers sometimes whispered, "If you look too long, the eyes might blink."

Everyone admired Elian, but they admired him from afar, because strangely, none of his paintings were ever seen for long. After finishing one, he would carefully wrap it, carry it to his attic, and lock the door tight. No one knew why.

"Why hide them?" asked Maren, the baker's daughter, who loved colors more than sweets.
"They are not ready," Elian would reply with a soft smile. That was always his answer.
Seasons passed, then years. The villagers spoke less of Elian's paintings and more of his odd secrecy. Some said he feared jealousy. Others thought he painted for kings in secret. But Elian never explained.

Then, one stormy night, everything changed. The sky roared, rain poured like endless rivers, and thunder shook the houses. Elian's old roof gave in, and water streamed into his attic. He rushed upstairs, but it was too late—dozens of his precious paintings were soaked, smeared, and torn.

In despair, Elian dragged the ruined canvases outside to throw them away. The storm passed by dawn, and as the sun rose, he sat slumped, heartbroken, believing all his years of work had gone to waste.

But soon, laughter drifted through the air. He lifted his head and saw the village children gathering around the discarded canvases. Some wore them as masks, faces half-smeared with colors. Others folded them into boats that floated in puddles, carrying streaks of brilliant paint like tiny rainbows. The baker's daughter, Maren, had cut shapes from the scraps and pinned them into a patchwork of wings.

“Look!” she shouted. “I can fly!” And she ran through the square, the wings flapping wildly as the villagers clapped and laughed.

Something stirred inside Elian’s chest. These were the paintings he thought were ruined yet in their ruin, they had sparked joy. They had given the villagers something he had never allowed them before: the chance to play with his art, to make it their own.

For the first time, Elian realized the truth. His art had never been about keeping beauty it was about sharing it. A painting locked in an attic was silent. But a painting, even broken, even imperfect, could still inspire.

From that day on, Elian no longer painted in secret. He set up his easel in the village square. Children gathered to watch him swirl colors, merchants paused to smile, and elders leaned on their walking sticks to see the shapes emerge. Sometimes his paintings were grand, sometimes clumsy, but he let them all be seen. And every now and then, he would hand a brush to a curious child or a neighbor and say, “Go on. Add your part.”

The village grew more colorful, not just from Elian’s hand but from everyone’s. Murals appeared on walls, windows glowed with painted glass, and children doodled flowers on stones. The village itself became a canvas.

Elian never again locked a painting away. He had learned that art, like sunlight, was meant to fall on everyone.

Moral of the Story: Creativity isn't finished when the artist stops. it's finished when it sparks something new in another heart.
